Notes for SHUKAIR BIN RASHED EL-HADDADEEN:

Shakara are descendants of Shukair. He inherited one fifth of the land of Ramallah from his father Rashed El-Haddadeen.

Shukair bequeathed his land equally to his sons' descendants Ghannam, Jubran, and Hani; and from them to their descendants.

All Arabs who came from the Arabian Peninsula belong either to the Queis or Yemen Tribes. These descendants took their tribal heritage with them as they migrated through out the Middle East. These two tribes often fought with each other mostly over land and water (which is very scarce in the the Arabian Peninsula. So the descendants of these tribes took with them their tribal customs and traditions where ever they went, including animosity to each other.

All of the Ramallah Clans, except for the Shakara Clan, belong to the Queis Tribe. The story goes that the Shakara Clan chose to belong to the Yaman Tribe because of their own self interest. Since their land was located near the village of Betounia, the families of which belonged to Yaman Tribe. So the Shakara clan joined the Yaman tribe to prevent their land from continually being raided by the neighboring families belonging to the Yaman tribe.
